Wild West Horse Photography Sessions

Come and kick up your heels at the Triple "D". For the last forty years, the Triple "D" has been recognized around the world for exhibiting trained North American and exotic wildlife species for photography, artist's references and cinema photography. Recently the Triple "D" has expanded their services to offer artists and photographers the chance to experience the ultimate in equine photography referred to as, "Horse Roundups." Picture yourself standing in a lush mountain meadow or alongside a crystal clear creek awaiting the approach of a colorful herd of horses, driven by western dressed wranglers, thundering towards you. This and much more is now being offered during all four seasons in beautiful Northwest Montana. The Triple "D" will also offers these events in California in April 2012.

The Triple "D" has been designing photography venues for years and knows what is necessary for an authentic western setting. All of the "Horse Roundup" backgrounds are chosen for their unique beauty and representative of the old west. You can count on running horses in various scenes influenced seasonally. This includes: snow fields, mountain meadows blanketed with wild flowers, crystal clear creek crossings, ridge tops for evening silhouettes, ponds to capture reflections, fall colors, old rustic log buildings and corrals all with the Rocky Mountains as a backdrop. Other photographic opportunities include portraits of the western dressed wranglers and the uniqueness of the tack on their saddle horses.
